Just a note on the Rye Park Wind Farm. Amazing how a few wingers can cut a viable renewable energy project down by up to possibly 42 turbines. Isn't there targets for the use of renewable energy? I'm sure that if the turbines were located on their land it would be all good. This land that is going to be used for the project is pretty much unproductive due to poor soil or the lack of it. As being a real local resident living in area for over 35 years find it hard to comprehend complaints from "ring ins" only being here a few years.
