Dear Sir/Madam,

We need our woodland. Without it, all life will die. It seems like just a small sacrifice for the greater good, but in reality, it's a sacrifice we can't afford. The way of the future is renewables, and the more we live in the past, the more we screw up our future. Turning a blind eye to the future of the planet you are entrusted with looking after a piece of. There is no greater good if there is no future, and I don't call polluting the planet more a greater good, or any good at all. More jobs and greater sustainability lie in renewables, not coal. If you must have coal seam gas, do it somewhere where it won't cause so much damage. I am 15 and I don't want to live to see the extinction of over half our natural life. This is what will happen if we don't take radical action. There is only one planet like this one, and only one forest like the mighty Pilliga. Don't go down in history as the people who killed the largest remaining woodland wilderness in Australia. As for me, I will fight for nature until my dying breath, no matter the opposition - even if I'm called crazy by all... Not literally... probably. What choice will you make?

I am happy for my name and submission to be included on your website... If you want, which you probably don't - I'm not that inspiring.

Yours Sincerely,

Esther Rosenberg,
