Hi, in listening to your hearing into the Glendale Mine extension I found Adrian Pilton's question implying 'why not burn NSW coal?...' highly offensive.

It's the drug dealer's response really. 'If I don't sell it to them, someone else will.'

I hope the commission has more care and takes more responsibility than Mr Pulton elicited in the tone and implication of his question.

If we continue to absolve ourselves of responsibility for climate change, regardless of the responses of others, then we have no carriage in this debate, no leverage to bring others on board, no global credibility (which we have already sacrificed).

The arguments provided by these presenters against the extension would be considered highly compelling by your children and their children. I hope you are capable of matching their compassion, concern and intellect.

Our planet seriously is relying on you! I hope you are up to it. NO EXTENSION!

Regards, David Lumley
