With a family property on [REDACTED] wallaroo it is an absolute privilege to take my daughter to experience vast open space without the feel of being in a city. I categorically object to this development going ahead. Major issues exist with the way this has been moved forward with little to no community consultation which means the majority of the community. This community thrives on the feel of living in the country which will completely change the lives of those living nearby and those who love to visit if this development goes ahead. Considerations such as the roads in wallaroo are already falling apart with potholes and broken verges. If trucks and to constantly travel along these roads they will be completely destroyed creating further danger and quite honestly risk of litigation as the condition of these roads are known.

Small children wait on the sides of these roads for thr school bus morning and arvo, children that live there that do not need to worry about being side swiped by a truck. Just imagine!

Wallaroo has a bussling winery scene that is only getting better, along with a riding school and other activities. You can stand on these property's and appreciate the Brindabellas in their beauty and rawness. Placing a solar factory here will absolutely destroy this Outlook and cause catastrophic effects to home and land prices. Everybody knows the risk of battery's and fire and the risk of bushfire here if started would be a hell you don't want to imagine. Wallaroo is already fairly segregated with the one road from the Barton. Picture this worst case scenario a fire does start due to the solar, fire spreads and cuts off the community. What happens then? Who's at fault?

It is in everyone's best interest to abandon the solar factory at this location due to these reasons such as community consultation, tourism impacts, child safety, road safety, housing impacts, environmental impacts, heritage outlook of area, mental health.
