While I don't have a problem with the concept of a solar farm, solar farms don't belong on actual farming land. We (Australia) surely have enough space that these types of developments should not be using valuable farming land or this close to homes. The fact that there is a state/territory border between homes and the development should not matter, and reasonable limits should still apply. Would you let a hydrogen plant, or nuclear plant be built in Wallaroo? No, so same should apply.
