I support the proposed project. We must embrace renewable energy if we are to achieve renewable energy targets and reduce greenhouse emissions.

The proposed project is well situated - close to a substation with the advantage that this will be more efficient for transmission. It is also a good use of the land as sheep will be able to continue to graze underneath the solar panels, giving the land a dual purpose. There are examples in western NSW, near Dubbo, of farmers wool quality benefitting from the solar panels.

The construction of the solar farm will generate jobs and there will be benefits to the community through discounted electricity.

I understand there are concerns of the impact to the community during the construction phase. These perceived impacts (if any) will be very short term and can be managed through consent conditions.
