To whom it may concern.

This is the Wrong site for such a venture which will undoubtedly need to expand at some point in the future.

It's true we're stuck with plastics but the recycling of it needs to be done responsibly on an appropriate site. Not in a suburb.

Plastics are a toxic waste that can only be recycled using strict control parameters and management.

It's not just a revenue raising tool for powers that be. It's a modern day catastrophe that requires a dedicated team that must show best practices.

It's taken us 60-70 years or more to realise just how toxic it is and just like asbestos, fracking for gas and heavy metals, as another major threat to humans, wildlife and air quality as well as the longevity of our natural world as a whole.

Redemption time.

Think and act with care for all of our futures.
